The STS program was launched early this year by AMS Director of Health, Safety and Environment Michael de Bettencourt. “The STS certification is a significant milestone for Aleut and our Project Manager. STS certified PMs are heralded by some of the world’s safest and most profitable large firms,” said de Bettencourt. “Organizations encouraging STS certification are frequently known to be world-class in safety performance with a focus on excellence in execution. As the first STS in the Aleut companies, Hal set the mark, and we hope to have many more STS-certified PMs in the near future.”

Mr. Stanton is the project manager for an IT support contract at Peterson Air Force Base in Colorado Springs, Colorado. When asked about the STS Program, Mr. Stanton said, “The certification shows we are taking an active interest in how our employees perform day-to-day tasks. Safety training is always a necessary component in keeping our team members safe and healthy.”
